I. READING

Crazy festivals.

Every year on 10th July, at Key West in Florida, five hundred musicians put on diving suits and go into the water - with their instruments! They play them under the water. People in suits and dresses dance underwater, too! It is impossible to make music underwater, of course, and the real music comes from CDs on boats. Two groups of friends had the first tomato fight in Buñol in 1944. Now, every year on the last Wednesday in August, more than 10,000 people arrive in the main square of this small Spanish town. The party begins in the morning. At twelve o'clock, lorries arrive with about forty thousand kilos of tomatoes. Then, for an hour, there is the biggest tomato fight in the world! After the fight, the people clean the square and have a shower. Every year, seven thousand fans watch cockroach races in a small town near Brisbane. The races are on 26th January, Australia's national day. There are fourteen races and big money prizes for the winners. After the races, there is a big party with music and dancing. Some crazy Brits play a sport with cheese. On the last Monday of May, in a small village in the county of Gloucestershire, the annual cheese-rolling takes place. People roll big, round pieces of cheese down the hill. And the competitors chase it. The first person to get to the bottom is the winner. The winners get prizes - big pieces of cheese. On 24th June in Poland, young boys and girls sometimes look for the fern flower, because the legend says that the person who finds it will be very rich and lucky. The problem is that ferns never have flowers.
