GIMNAZJUM KLASA 3

I. READING

Beth Tweedle hated gymnastics when she started. Now she's a world champion. Beth started gymnastics when she was seven because she had too much energy. She jumped on beds, climbed trees and made her brother angry! So her parents said she should join the gymnastics club. When Beth first started gymnastics, she hated it. "I locked myself in my bedroom. I hated going to the gym, but my parents said I had to." She didn't have any heroes in gymnastics. "I never had posters of gymnasts on my wall," she says, "just one of Michael Owen - my family are big football fans." Beth didn't like gymnastics but she was very good at it. Soon she she was the second best gymnast in the UK. Now she loves the hard work and spends seven hours a day, six days a week, in the gym. There isn't much time for seeing her boyfriend, Dave. It's difficult. There are so many times she just wants to be with him, but they're always on the phone, texting or e-mailing. Beth is twenty-one now, and people often ask her when she will retire. "Gymnasts don't have short careers anymore. It is now possible to compete until you're thirty. And I think I'm getting better. I don't want to stop yet. Now my hero is Leszek Blanik - a Polish gymnast, World and Olympic champion in vault. He became the Olympic champion at the age of thirty-one. On August 18, 2008 he won the gold medal in men's vault at the Olympic Games in Beijing."
