

I. READING

Jenny is fifteen years old. She lives in a big flat in the centre of London with her parents. Their flat is a penthouse. They have a kitchen, a dining room, a big living room, six bedrooms, a study, two bathrooms and two toilets. Jenny's father is a professor at Oxford University. He spends his free time reading in the study. Jenny hasn't got any sisters or brothers. She loves the city. It's really exciting. Jenny goes to school in London. On a weekday she gets up at eight o'clock, eats breakfast - cornflakes with milk - and goes to school. The school is not far from her home. She usually gets there by the Tube. (It's the London underground). It takes her only six minutes. She has lessons from 9 o'clock to 4 o'clock pm. Jenny is quite a good student. Her best subject is French. She is also very good at Geography and History. She's isn't good at Maths or Science. When the weather is good, Jenny comes back home on foot with her friends. It takes her about half an hour. Her best friend is Sally. They are in the same class. They go shopping together or simply watch beautiful clothes and things in shop windows. At seven o'clock p. m. Jenny has dinner with her parents. She usually has fish or pasta with a lot of vegetables. She loves all kinds of fruit and vegetables except spinach. She's been a vegetarian for three years. After dinner Jenny goes swimming or walks a family dog. Then she reads a book or watches an interesting programme on TV. She goes to bed at ten thirty.

At the weekend Jenny sleeps much longer. On Saturdays after breakfast, she often plays basketball or goes shopping with her friends. There are a lot of great shops and department stores in the centre of London. There are a lot of galleries and museums, too, and they are usually free. London is fantastic! She hardly ever leaves it. On Saturday evenings Sally goes to a disco or a party with Sally. She never goes to bed before midnight.
