

I. READING

Guy and Sue are eighteen years old. Sue lives with her parents and her sister a few miles from the centre of Oxford. Guy lives in the centre of town with his mother, father and brother. They finished school in July, but they are having a gap year before they go to university. They are working in advertising now to save some money and then go travelling abroad for a few months.

Guy and Sue went to the same school, and they get on very well. They're both very sociable, and they like doing similar things in their free time. They're mad about films, and they also like the same kind of music: they often go to rock concerts together.

Sue is really interested in art. She loves painting and sculpture. Guy is very good at basketball, and he's just joined a local team. He's playing his first important match tomorrow.

Sue's sister, Emily, is fourteen. Her favourite subject at school is Music, and she plays the violin in the school orchestra. Emily is quite sociable, but she likes being on her own as well. In the evenings she usually reads or listens to music. She doesn't like playing sports like basketball or cricket, but she likes swimming. In the future, she wants to be a lawyer or a doctor, so she has to study hard. She's working in a shop on Saturdays this term because she's trying to save some money every week. She wants to buy an electric violin.

Guy's brother, Patrick, is twenty. He is a student at Oxford University. Now he's doing some voluntary work at the black rhino reserve in Kenya. Black rhinos are in great danger - only 500 are alive in Africa now. He goes out every day to check the numbers of animals and the plants they eat. He walks long distances in the heat. It isn't the job for lazy people, but it's so interesting. He has seen all kinds of animals, and now he's helping to look after a baby chimpanzee that lost its mother. He loves travelling and when he finishes his work in the game reserve, he's going to travel to Uganda and South Africa.
