I. READING

The Caribbean is a very beautiful and interesting region in Central America. Between the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea there are nearly seven thousand large and tiny islands. Many of them are surrounded by wonderful coral reefs. The archipelago is four thousand kilometres long. The largest island in the Caribbean is Cuba, where one of the last communist regimes exists. Cuba is one of thirteen independent island states in the Caribbean. Some other countries, like Jamaica, Trinidad & Tobago, Bahamas, Barbados and St. Kitts are famous for excellent runners, who won a lot of Olympic medals. Barbados and Trinidad are relatively rich countries, while Haiti and Cuba belong to the world's poorest states.

Besides independent states, there are fourteen dependent territories and two French overseas departments. The dependent islands belong to the USA, the UK, the Netherlands and France.

The Caribbean islands have tropical climate, beautiful beaches and fascinating nature.

One of the British islands there is Montserrat. The people of this island were living on an active volcano, but they had no idea until they found out about it in the summer of 1995.

They were doing their everyday jobs when the Soufrière Hills volcano erupted. A huge black cloud of ash fell on the south of the island, including the capital city, Plymouth, and covered it completely. Surprisingly, no one died and no one was injured that day, but for their safety, the people had to leave their homes, and go to the north of the island.

Unfortunately, it wasn't the only eruption. There were several over the next two years, and in 1997 came the biggest eruption of all. One of these killed nineteen people in one day, and another destroyed the capital. Some islanders took money offered by the British government and left Montserrat. The population fell from eleven thousand to four and a half thousand. Normal life hasn't been possible, as the volcano has remained active. There are plans to make Plymouth, which is still covered in ash, into the Pompeii of the Caribbean.

A hundred years ago, a similar eruption of Mt. Pelée, the volcano on the island of Martinique, killed thirty thousand people in Saint Pierre. Now Martinique as well as Guadeloupe are French overseas departments.
